Overcoming Objections
OVERVIEW

It is likely in any selling situation that obstacles will have to be overcome before a buying decision is made. Often, we make the mistake of “handling” objections in such a way that the buyer is turned off. Resolving objections effectively is a process that involves careful, sensitive listening along with positive, factual responses to buyer concerns.

We must understand that buyer objections are not always rational. Objections are often totally emotional. We must respond to customers’ emotional needs, along with the obstacles preventing them from buying, if we want to build long-term relationships.

“When life hands you lemons, don’t just make lemonade. Open up a lemonade stand.”
—Dale Carnegie
Objection Rule: Resolve objections by finding points of agreement, clarifying the issues, and providing compelling reasons to proceed.

10. The only way to get the best of an argument is to avoid it.

11. Show respect for the other person’s opinion. Never say, “you’re wrong.”

12. If you are wrong, admit it quickly and emphatically.

14. Get the other person saying “yes, yes” immediately.

15. Let the other person do a great deal of the talking.

16. Let the other person feel the idea is his or hers.

17. Try honestly to see things from the other person’s point of view.

18. Be sympathetic with the other person’s ideas and desires.

19. Appeal to the nobler motives.

20. Dramatize your ideas.

21. Throw down a challenge.

LISTEN FOR UNDERSTANDING

STEP ONE

It can be a real challenge to really listen to objections. Most salespeople face the same handful of objections, and we tend to hear them all the time. We generally think we know what the buyer is going to say, and we often know how we will respond. This creates a tendency to listen halfway through and jump in to respond. This is an important time to slow down the sales process, listen for understanding, and see objections from the buyer’s point of view.

- ATTENTIVE
- SELECTIVE
- PRETEND
- IGNORE

CUSHION

STEP TWO

A cushion is a statement that acknowledges that we listened to the prospect, heard the objection, and recognized its importance. When a buyer states an objection, our first action should be to cushion the objection. A cushion does not agree, disagree, or answer the objection.

Examples of Cushions:

<tr>

<th>Cushion</th>

<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Your price is considerably higher than I expected.</td>
<td>I appreciate your concern about the investment.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>I am happy with my current provider.</td>
<td>I’m sure your current provider has been satisfactory.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>My staff is happy with the process they are using now.</td>
<td>Certainly you want to keep your staff happy.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>I do not think we’re ready to make a change at this time.</td>
<td>I know you want to make the right decision at the right time.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

When the client gives an objection, it can be perceived in four ways:

- What they say
- What we hear
- What we interpret it to mean
- What they really mean

It is critical that, before responding to the client’s concern, both the salesperson and the client clearly understand what the concern really is. Let’s be careful not to interpret the objection, because our response might be off target if our interpretation is incorrect.

Example

When a prospect says, “Your price is too high,” he or she might actually be saying something quite different.

What the prospect says: “Your price is too high.”

What we hear: He or she is balking at the price; we aren’t competitive.

What we interpret it to mean: I’ve got to do something about the price or I might lose this sale.

What the prospect really means: Based on the information that I have, the price/value relationship doesn’t appear to be in balance. Help me understand.

EVALUATE

We may think that we have done a terrific job of resolving the buyer’s objection. However, it is what the buyer feels that is important. Before moving ahead, let’s take a moment to evaluate whether or not the buyer is ready to move forward toward a commitment.

Examples:

Does that make you feel more comfortable about the investment?

How does that sound?

Does that address your concern?
